

Art Communicates

By Jane Denison

Within any form of artistic expression the artist is actually transporting inner thoughts and ideas to a point in space outside themselves. A little like body language actions. Unintentionally or intentionally the artist is voicing, creating, shaping, performing, or writing ideas that have become actively alive in their thinking at the time they begin to create.

Communication is obvious in all forms of existence.